

REX FLEET

ISSUE
#1

THREE POWERS. ONE FRONTIER.

FROM THE EDITOR

WELCOME TO REX FLEET

THREE POWERS. ONE FRONTIER.

The old order ended with the Shattering.

What remains is a civilization divided among three powers, each carrying its own version of the past and its own vision for the future. The Core offers stability through institutions and command. The Shards survive through strength, loyalty, and hard-won independence. Along the Verge, scattered communities have learned that distance from power does not guarantee freedom from it.

Between them sails Rex Fleet.

At the center of this series is Commodore Ilyra Venn: an experienced officer entrusted with maintaining peace in a region where every rescue can be interpreted as an invasion, every negotiation conceals competing histories, and even the most honorable order may carry consequences far beyond its intent.

Rex Fleet is a political space opera about the people asked to hold a fractured world together. Its battles are fought with starships, certainly, but also through diplomacy, memory, obligation, and the difficult choices made when no faction possesses the whole truth.

In the issues ahead, the frontier will widen. New ports, hidden settlements, rival fleets, and unexpected alliances will reveal how differently the Shattering is remembered across inhabited space. Familiar figures will be tested outside the structures that once defined them. Voices usually ignored by the great powers will begin to shape events themselves.

The scale will grow, but the series will remain grounded in its people: officers carrying the weight of command, civilians living beneath decisions made light-years away, and communities determined not to become pieces on someone else's board.

There are no simple empires here. No faction is merely what its enemies claim. The Core, the Shards, and the Verge each contain courage, cruelty, compromise, and contradiction. The question is not simply who should rule.

It is whether a shared future can be built by people who cannot agree on the past.

Thank you for joining us at the beginning.

THE CORRIDOR IS OPEN.

THE EDITORS

STAR SPLITTER VISIONS

Helmet.
Tight. Eyes on me.

Crates first.
No stragglers.

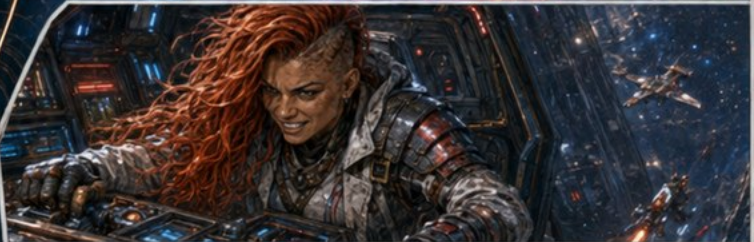

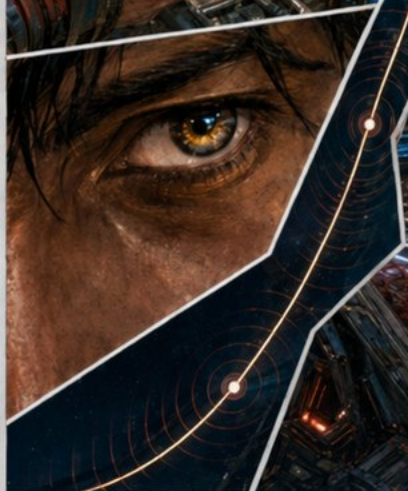

Civilians down!
Down now!

Tomorrow,
we try again.

